Groundbreaking Set Sept. 27 For Geodesic Gymnasium

Groundbreaking for the University's new geodesic design gymnasium has been slated for September 27, according to President Godfrey T. Anderson.

University Councillors, who have underwritten the project, and University officers will join in a luncheon preceding the ceremony.

The multipurpose structure is estimated to cost $300,000, Dr. Anderson stated, and with its seating capacity of approximately 2,800, will provide adequate space for varied group and individual activities. In addition to platform and storage areas, lockers and individual physical training sections are planned. Additional construction to enhance its uses is anticipated at some future date, Dr. Anderson said.

Plans by Councillors

Plans for the building were developed by the councillors' gymnasium plans committee, chaired by Los Angeles businessman Harry A. Schirilo, in collaboration with University officers and committees and Development Offices. Councillors' financing of the gymnasium has been directed by Jerry L. Pettis, Loma Linda, chairman of the University Councillors, and Harold S. Campbell, Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, chairman of its finance committee.

Implementation of the project has now been turned over to the University, Dr. Anderson explained. However, representatives of the councillors' plans committee will continue to meet with the University officers responsible for the construction.

Gym Location

The facility will be located at the northern end of a planned mall extending from it through the administration building breezeway to the new Medical Center on the south. This will place the gymnasium just north of the present campus tennis courts, which will then be relocated still farther north.

Plans are already under way to insure the availability of the building process.

The University Councillors is composed of leading business and professional men throughout the nation who serve as advisors to the president, meeting with him on a quarterly schedule.

Floor plans and an architectural rendering of the new gymnasium will appear in the next issue of University Scope.

PATRICK H. HICKS, University Church minister of music, tries out the Harvard four-manual Aeolian-Skinner pipe organ to be installed at the University Church late next year.

Church Acquires Famous Organ From Harvard University Chapel

A 122-rank pipe organ, now at Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts, will be transported across country this fall to become a primary medium for musical worship, accompaniment, and sacred performance at University Seventh-day Adventist Church.

The four-manual Aeolian-Skinner instrument is presently located in the Harvard Memorial Church. "It will be replaced there with a European-type mechanical action organ," stated Patrick H. Hicks, University Church minister of music.

"Their decision, however, is our gain," he said, "for this is a famous instrument, originally installed under the direction of G. Donald Harrison, distinguished tonal director of the Aeolian-Skinner Company."

The generosity of a group of individuals in the University community, Mr. Hicks pointed out, made it possible to acquire the organ. The purchase agreement calls for the removal of the organ by December 1. The work of renovating, up-dating, re-voicing, and installing will proceed as funds become available. Plans set a target date of December 1967, for completion of the installation here.

Replacement value of the instrument is estimated at $200,000. Church officials expect their total cost to be less than half that amount.

Health Work Centennial Commemorated at LLU

Centennial services commemorating the founding of the first Seventh-day Adventist medical institution were held at Loma Linda University this week.

In a Tuesday noon service University president Godfrey T. Anderson related a brief history of the Seventh-day Adventist medical work and re-dedicated the University as it begins its second century of service.

Dr. Anderson stated that it is proper that we "take this occasion to pause in honor of those pioneers who in vision, courage, deeds, and in the worship of the Holy Spirit" made this great medical institution possible.

Many people in the latter half of the nineteenth century thought that no sectarian medical institution could survive, he said, and that after a few years of existence, Seventh-day Adventist medical work would be snuffed out.

World Trend Set

But in the decade from 1895-1905, 18 Seventh-day Adventist medical institutions sprang up all over the world, from Australia to Denmark.

M. Theodore Mackett, SM'68, and Faye E. Heath, SN'67, re-dedicated the students to the task before them and expressed appreciation in behalf of the students for the pioneering work of the early medical leaders.

Following the centennial service, refreshments were served by the Volunteer Service League.

On the preceding Friday, an illustrated historical resume of the early days of Adventist health emphasis was presented in the Campus Chapel by Oliver L. Jacques, director of the University relations and great-grandson of Ellen G. White, pioneer leader.

"Imagine the courage and vision of people like farmer John P. Kellogg and his wife Anne, who, although they had 16 children, gave $500 to start our first health institution in 1866," he said. "This was at a

Sept. 13 Ceremonies For RT Students

Students in the Division of Radiologic Technology will have their annual presentation ceremony on September 13, in Olivet Chapel at the White Memorial Medical Center, Los Angeles.

The presentation speaker will be Ernest J. Braun, MD, associate professor of radiology and chairman of the White Memorial Medical Center radiology service.

Certificates and pins will be awarded to students at the ceremony. A reception will follow immediately.

Community Fair Set for October 30

The Loma Linda Home and School Association annual community fair is set for October 30, according to Drucilla Modglin, fair chairman.

The fair will have as its theme "America the Beautiful." Groups, individuals, and organizations are urged to begin their planning for parade entries. Other events will include a horse show, exhibits, and food booths.

The fourth annual fair will be held at Loma Linda Union Academy school grounds.

Honored Former Navy Officer Gives LLU His Estate in Trust

One of the few holders of both the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross has given his $75,000 estate in trust to Loma Linda University.

John H. Balch of 26171 Fountainbleu Drive, Sun City, has specified that the funds be used to educate physicians for both foreign and domestic areas where medical service is inadequate.

A retired general insurance agent and broker from Waukegan, Illinois, Mr. Balch was honored for World War I service as a US Navy hospital corpsman attached to the Marine Corps. Three European governments also recognized his service with the French Croix de Guerre and its Italian and Portuguese equivalents.

Throughout 10 years of active duty in two wars Mr. Balch, a conscientious objector, never bore arms. Following World War II he remained in the Naval Reserve until 1956 when he retired with the rank of commander.

MR. AND MRS. JOHN BALCH, Sun City, discuss their recent $75,000 trust estate agreement with Leonard Robinson, Loma Linda University's associate director of development.

A Viable Seed, Indeed

One hundred years ago the Seventh-day Adventist Church with barely 3,500 members, planted the first "seed" of a medical work which today extends to 189 countries, employs 17,517 persons, and treats nearly four million people every year.

Three events in 1866 marked the beginning of a church-centered health emphasis: (1) a unanimous vote by the General Conference to launch a strong health program, (2) the publication of a health journal, and (3) the opening of a health institution.

This issue of University SCOPE reports the simple yet significant ceremonies here commemorating that beginning. Seventh-day Adventist medical pioneers have been honored, the early institutions memorialized, a re-dedication made to the basic principles upon which this program is founded. This is as it should be.

We should not forget, however, that in this institution as well as others, many disciplines contribute to a broad spectrum of health emphasis today.

Active in this field in addition to the School of Medicine, are the Schools of Dentistry, Nursing, and Health-Related Professions, which includes medical technology, radiologic technology, physical therapy, occupational therapy, and medical record administration, as well as Graduate School specialty areas of various health-related types.

Also sharing the spotlight are six additional collegiate schools of nursing located elsewhere in the nation, and 23 outside North America.

The "seed" planted in 1866 was viable indeed. It has been a great century of progress.

An Honored Name

Loma Linda University lost an esteemed friend in the recent death of James A. Guthrie, editor emeritus of the San Bernardino Sun-Telegram.

Mr. Guthrie was named University Associate last year on the occasion of the sixtieth anniversary of his newspaper career, begun in San Bernardino in 1905. It was coincidentally also the sixtieth anniversary of the University.

Supporter, patron, and defender of Loma Linda University, Mr. Guthrie was ever ready to tell and retell the story of University growth and accomplishments.

In his primary career as editor of the Sun-Telegram he did outstanding work in the best tradition of his profession. He was called a newspaperman's newspaperman.

In final rites, this dedicated journalist, community leader, and state highway commissioner was eulogized by ministers of Jewish, Catholic, and Protestant faiths, and honored by the presence of three of California's governors.

Because of his deep interest in freeway planning, someone said his name was written all over California.

It is written deeply here, in the annals of honored University Associates.

Impressions of Growth

We are reminded by a number of recent news events that our local economy is in a period of expansion.

A proposal for a thirteen-acre shopping mall has been taken under consideration by the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors. The project has already received the approval of the County Planning Commission. The mall would be bounded by Barton Road, Anderson Street, Prospect Avenue, and Hillcrest Street. Active support is being given the proposal by the Loma Linda Chamber of Commerce.

An undertaking of this nature, whether or not it comes to immediate fruition, is itself an indication of community vigor.

Development of a new public airport between Loma Linda and Norton Air Force Base, a few miles north, is contemplated by the San Bernardino Regional Economic Development Council. This would mean another facility added to those already provided the area by the nearby Tri-City Airport and the Redlands Municipal Airport.

A half-million dollar expansion program was recently inaugurated at Montecito Memorial Park, a cemetery association just west of Loma Linda.

Construction of a long-awaited overpass on Anderson Street has been slated for January. Funds of more than half a million dollars have been appropriated for this.

Add to these items the recent Southern California Edison Company's announcement that the continuing growth of outlying areas of Loma Linda and Highgrove has permitted a rate reduction for domestic users, and the resulting impression of a solid, growing community is an irresistible one.

Vernier Radcliffe Library Exhibits Health Memorabilia

Three displays are on exhibit in the Vernier Radcliffe Memorial Library commemorating the 100th anniversary of the origin of Seventh-day Adventist health emphasis.

One display is in the main lobby showcase, and two others are downstairs, opposite the browsing room.

Memorabilia, early issues of health literature, and early photos are on view in the exhibits.

Ecuador-Peru Travelog Leads '66-'67 Artist-Lecture Series

"Ecuador and Peru," film lecture by Ernest S. Booth, PhD, will be featured September 17 in the Loma Linda University 1966-67 Artist and Lecture Series.

Dr. Booth spent the summer of 1964 in South America collecting material for a series of 13 television shows on the medical missionary work of the Seventh-day Adventist Church in that continent. Recorded sounds of the countries including authentic - source background music will be featured.

It will be the first of nine programs to be presented throughout the school year. All programs will be in Burden Hall at 8 p.m. A very limited number of season tickets will be available at the Registrar's Office, beginning Wednesday, September 14. Season tickets must be presented at the door on the evening of the performance.

Abstruse Viewpoint Conjures Provocative Analysis of Media

UNDERSTANDING MEDIA: THE EXTENSIONS OF MAN, by Marshall McLuhan (McGraw-Hill, 1964), is a fascinating book for a variety of reasons. It is a provocative book—and not the least provoking feature is the subtle absurdity of much of its content. There is also the mystery-story type of frustration for the reader attempting to track down the source of uncredited direct quotations and borrowed ideas.

Another is the self-assured superiority of the author in presenting wisdom which has somehow escaped — according to him — the world's leading economists, anthropologists, sociologists, psychoanalysts, and philosophers. In addition, the reader must constantly assure the book is based ("cool," "hot," "dig," "with it") still means what the author intended, since slang, as the author himself points out, does change radically and often rapidly in meaning.

Medium Is its Own Message

The basic message of the book is that the medium carrying a message is itself the message—and a more important communication than the content. Media is a more inclusive term than the reader may expect. Along with the more familiar newspaper, radio, TV, etc., are clothing, housing, money, wheels, weapons.

As the author explains "Clothing and housing, as extensions of skin and heat-control mechanisms, are media of communication, first of all, in the sense that they shape and rearrange the patterns of human association and community." (p. 127) He does not consider the possibility, which anthropology and sociology offer, that culture and social structure ("human association and community") may "shape and rearrange" clothing and housing—sometimes with little apparent attention to their uses as "extensions of skin and heat control." Consider the Eskimo who builds a solid, insulating house of earth and snow, while his neighbor, the Siberian native, under the same conditions chooses a light skin tent with wood frame—and will sit unprotected in the cold until his wife erects that! (Cf. Herskovits, Man and His Works, pp. 157, 158)

RESIDENTS OF PUEBLO NUEVO in Chiapas, Mexico, crowd around a few of the 43 members of the University medical team dispensing medicine during an outbreak of cholera in the remote Indian village. Mexican officials credited the efforts of the medical-dental group with averting a widespread epidemic. Americans (left to right) are Howard C. Smith, MD, director of University Health Service and leader of the clinical field trip, Bill Sherman, mission employee, and Robert L. Roy, SD '67.

FRANKLIN C. ORDELHEIDE, SD '68, works on the teeth of a student at Linda Vista School. At right is dental assistant Shirley Walker, of Rialto.

MANY of the medical problems dealt with by the team were the result of inadequate home hygiene. Typically, families and animals live together in all-too-familiar congeniality, sharing food and filth with complete disregard for the illnesses and infestations that inevitably result.

MARTHA L. SEVERSON, PT '66, found some work in her physical therapy field, but more often doubled as a dental assistant. Here she helps John Kizziar, SD '67, in a restorative procedure utilizing portable air rotor equipment.

LIVING QUARTERS of the University medical team—occupied or not—were the subject of unbridled curiosity on the part of the Sonora Indians. Here, two young women in typical Chamula costume peer through the window of the nurses' sleeping area.

Scuba Diving Class To Start Here Soon

A class in scuba diving will be held at the University swimming pool, according to Mac McGirr, pool director.

Classes will begin as soon as 10 students are registered for the course. A charge of $35 will be made to all scuba students and will include equipment, 12 hours of class instruction, and a "graduation" trip to Santa Catalina Island or San Clemente Island.

Prospective students will be required to participate in an endurance swim as a prerequisite for entering the class.

of the body and a medium of communication, but that the message is the hand rather than the gesture.

Literacy vs. Culture

McLuhan makes much of the effects of literacy on civilization, which in most cases he seems to equate with the West (cf. p. 84). Now, while it is true that literacy has undoubtedly had a great deal to do with the course of history or of civilization, yet can one generalize as he has done and say that all peoples having ideographic literacy (the alphabet) will have another? There is a wide range of variation and overlap in both.

He also speaks in a number of places of "tribal culture," as if this were a clear-cut distinct thing. In actuality tribes vary as much as nations in their way of viewing the world. McLuhan also fails to consider the distinct possibility that culture may have affected the type of literacy even more than the type of literacy affected the culture.

Examples Questioned

Examples used to illustrate some ideas are open to question. McLuhan uses the Eskimo's dwelling as an example of a communication medium. Then he says that the primitive shape and the use of snow in building the igloo, contrary to what most people think, is not native Eskimo, but a recent Eskimo invention as a result of the introduction of the primus stove and trapping by the white men.

He gives no source for this claim, and certainly it is not corroborated by the standard anthropological sources, such as Driver, Indians of North America, or Jenness, People of the Twilight.

McLuhan says, "Let the igloo serve as an example of the way in which a new pattern is

LU Hospital Hikes Rates, Pay Scales

Loma Linda University Hospital last week announced increased rates for daily patient care effective immediately.

Administrator Clarence A. Miller said increases range from $5 to $12, depending on the type of room and care. Other hospitals in the county had instituted rate hikes of $9 to $12 effective September 1, the date when nurses and other hospital personnel received wage increases.

Mr. Miller outlined old and new daily rates at Loma Linda this way:

- Minimal care, formerly $25, to be $30.
- Pediatrics unit, formerly $31.50, to be $42.50.
- Multi-bed ward, formerly $32.50, to be $42.50.
- Three-bed ward, formerly $32.50, to be $44.50.
- Semi-private (two-bed) room, formerly $34.50, to be $46.50.
- Private room, formerly $38, to be $49.50.

The University Hospital was the last of major private and community hospitals in the county to announce rate increases in line with recommendations of the 189-member Hospital Council of Southern California. Mr. Miller said officials had needed extra time for study of the effective wage increases at the University medical complex, which has specialized employees and staff that the other area hospitals would not need to consider.

With only County General Hospital remaining to announce rate increases, all hospitals in the county are within or under the cost guidelines suggested by Hospital Council spokesmen last week. They had indicated that hospitals would be forced to charge up to $50 for semi-private and $51 for private rooms in order to cover massive employee pay increases and meet other rising costs of hospital operation.

Dr. Walden Attends East Coast Seminars

Richard T. Walden, MD, associate professor of the department of preventive medicine and public health, left this week to attend the second annual Seminar on Preventive Cardiology being held in Stowe, Vermont. He will return by way of Washington, D.C., for a National Institutes of Health public health seminar.

Dr. Walden was a recent participant in a student research project evaluation program conducted by the California State Department of Public Health division of research.

Forty-six students from 20 medical schools were evaluated by the project team which met with the students in Berkeley.

introduced into an ancient way of life by the intensification of a single factor—in this instance, artificial heat." (p. 126) Yet Driver and others discuss the way the Eskimo has for centuries heated his igloo of snow, earth, or stone by means of the stone lamp burning seal blubber, coupled with the body heat of numerous occupants stripped to the waist.

McLuhan's conclusion, that a change in one facet of the technology of a society will result in other changes to produce a new balance, is undoubtedly sound. It is too bad that he could not give either an agreed-upon example, or at least produce a source for his "surprise" example. This, incidentally, is one of the book's main faults. Ideas and even

Alumni News

The following letter was received recently from Charles Stafford, '60, and his wife, Ruth, SN '60. Mr. and Mrs. Stafford are currently on mission appointment in Africa.

Dear Alumni,

Greetings from the heart of Africa. This is to register that the drums of our hearts are still beating for home. After two and one-half years at Heri Mission Hospital, directing the health education school of the Seventh-day Adventists, we can assure you that mission life is a great challenge and thrill, and we love every day of it.

Ruth is in charge of the wives of the men who are sent to learn methods of health education. This semester she is teaching one morning and three afternoons each week. The morning class is in home nursing, which will continue for another week, after which I will take over teaching hydrotherapy. Her afternoons include cooking class, Sabbath school workshop, and a community sewing class.

lengthy quotations are used with little or no identification of their source. There is no footnoting. A good bibliography gives some clues, but this is a vague sort of attribution.

One interesting discussion concerns the sudden rise to popularity in America of the paperback book and the small (European-type) car. McLuhan attributes this new development to the effects of TV in making the American lose "his inhibitions and his innocence about depth culture." (p. 329) He apparently does not recognize that a major part of the popularity of the paperback and the small car is economy.

Nor does he mention that a new technique of binding developed in the fifties made possible a sturdy enough cheap binding for paperbacks that college professors felt justified in assigning them for classes. And a sizable portion of the "popularity" of the paperback is "forced" purchase by college students.

Clever Titles

Not all of the book deserves negative comment. The chapter titles are clever. For example: "Press: Government by News Leak," "Motorcar: The Mechanical Bride," "Ads: Keeping Upset with the Joneses," "The Telephone: Sounding Brass or Tinkling Symbol?" The writing style, though, is disturbing. The book aims to be an in-depth analysis, but the analysis is done in a superficial way, hopping from example to example.

All of this criticism is not to imply that the book is not worth reading. The chapters on TV and on radio, for instance, are both interesting and thought-provoking. In fact, the main value of the book is to provoke thought.

Bacon said that some books are to be chewed and digested, but we might add that some are to be debated and even refuted. That is the role of this book.

Tomorrow afternoon I will be going with five men to carry on some "house to house" medical evangelism which will consist of a health talk, a hydro treatment, and a short Bible study. The word "house" is in quotes because they are only beehive - shaped grass-thatched huts. Later in the year we hope to spend a week in the town of Kigoma, which is 45 miles away, and begin a similar program.

Wedding bells rang for Donald A. Schneider, '63, on July 3, at Hitchcock, Oklahoma. His wife, Harolene, graduated in 1966 from Baylor University, Dallas, Texas, as a dental hygienist. They have a new home at 11602 Newberg Road, Rockford, Illinois. Don has charge of physical therapy for Americana Nursing Homes in Rockford and Rochelle, Illinois.

Wedding bells also have rung for De Etta Marcedene Eisenman, '64, and James Delven Burr, on Monday, August 15, at Mobridge, South Dakota. De Etta has been on the physical therapy staff at the Glendale Adventist Hospital, Glendale, since graduation.

Word has just been received that Galen A. Pettey, '64, and his wife, Ann, and family are moving from Napa to Madison, Tennessee, where Galen will be chief therapist in the physical therapy department in the new hospital building at Madison.

Vivian C. Blair, '63, and Martha L. Severson, '66, were members of the University team who spent three weeks on the annual field trip in Mexico. The girls report a worthwhile and interesting experience.

Veterans' Official Scheduled to Meet LLU Administrators

Cyril F. Brickfield, general counsel to the Veterans Administration, will meet with University officials on September 22 to discuss the possibility of locating a Veterans Administration hospital in the Loma Linda area.

Mr. Brickfield, along with US Congressman Ken Dyal, will tour the new medical center and lunch with University officials.

Local veterans groups have been promoting a Veterans Administration hospital in the San Bernardino valley for some time. They claim the area has many veterans who have to travel too far to overcrowded VA hospitals in other areas for medical attention.

The Loma Linda University Medical Center offers a suitable location since it is centrally located and offers the facilities of a medical school which are available at most other VA hospitals.

Funds Appropriated For Rail Overpass

The California Highway Commission recently approved $570,500 for an overpass on Anderson Street in Loma Linda across the Southern Pacific Railroad tracks.

The four-lane bridge is scheduled for construction starting March 1. The purpose of the bridge is to eliminate a serious traffic hazard which in the past has resulted in several fatalities at the crossing.

University officials have expressed the desire for the overpass to be completed by the time the new Medical Center is completed next summer.

Medicine

Merle H. Peterson, '52, staff member of the Youngberg Memorial Hospital in Singapore, was a recent visitor at Loma Linda. Dr. Peterson accepted an urgent call to the mission field before he had an opportunity to take board examinations in thoracic surgery. His return was to fulfill that requirement.

After having been certified as a member of the American Board of General Surgery and also in the area of thoracic surgery, he returned to mission service in Singapore. While in Loma Linda he visited at the home of Mrs. Peterson's parents, Pastor and Mrs. A. J. Olson.

Charles B. Perkins, '33, former Napa County director of public health, has joined the staff of the Holderman Hospital, Veterans Home of California. Dr. Perkins retired from the Air Force in 1963 with 28 years of active duty.

In addition to many campaign medals, he was awarded the Legion of Merit in 1945 and the Air Force commendation ribbon on three occasions. He served in the Pacific theater of operations during World War II.

As domiciliary medical officer at the Veterans Home, Dr. Perkins will be primarily concerned with the health care of all members in domiciliary status. His clinic will provide basic medical services at the domiciliary level and will refer members to the hospital for the major care required. Dr. Perkins and his wife, Eleanor, reside in Napa.

Alumni News

Calvin A. Olson, '50, will soon join the medical staff at the Youngberg Memorial Hospital in Singapore as surgeon. Recently, while on furlough from service in Tokyo, Dr. Olson took examinations in Canada to qualify him to practice in the British protectorate of Singapore.

While in the US he completed board examinations qualifying him as a diplomate of both the American Board of Surgery and the American Board of Thoracic Surgery. He has since been made a fellow of the American College of Surgeons.

While en route to Singapore, Dr. Olson stopped for six weeks of emergency duty at the Seventh-day Adventist Hospital in Saigon, South Vietnam. He is the son of Pastor and Mrs. A. J. Olson of Loma Linda.

Medical Student Of 3rd Generation

This fall Arthur S. Donaldson, III, will become the first third-generation student to enter the School of Medicine, according to Walter B. Clark, dean of admissions.

There have been some, Dean Clark states, whose fathers were graduates of our University and whose grandfathers were graduates of the American Medical Missionary College, but none where both were graduated here.

Donaldson is a recent graduate of La Sierra College. His father, Norton A. Donaldson, SM '43, is a resident physician at the Orange County General Hospital in Orange.

time when that was two years' wages for a working man."

One of the Kellogg's children, John Harvey, eventually became the renowned medical director of the phenomenally successful Battle Creek Sanitarium in Michigan.

"The real start of Adventist medical missions was in 1891," Mr. Jacques emphasized. "Twenty men and women dedicated themselves in the General Conference parlor to medical missionary service, and then attended medical school in Ann Arbor, Michigan, where a special dormitory was built just for Adventists."

Following their success, the American Medical Missionary College was established in 1895. The Loma Linda purchase came in 1905, and the center of the medical work was transferred west.

"We can best observe this centennial," Mr. Jacques concluded, "by re-identifying our individual and institutional objectives with the pioneers' high motive to show forth the kindness of God."

First Pastoral Clinic Graduates Include Adventist Minister

Pastor Brent R. Border, a Seventh-day Adventist minister from Alomosa, Colorado, along with students of several other religious denominations, has just finished a quarter of pastoral training at Loma Linda University Hospital, according to course director, Charles W. Teel, hospital chaplain.

Pastor Border he has been granted a full year's leave and will further his training at the Fort Logan Hospital in Denver, Colorado. Chaplain Teel states that many seminaries today will not graduate a student without a minimum of one quarter of clinical experience.

Clinical training experience consists of an hour of group therapy each day, an individual session with the chaplain supervisor, working with certain assigned areas in the hospital, and the writing of verbatims along with some structural class sessions. Eight hours of university credit is allowed for each quarter's work. This is the first clinical training program of its kind offered by the University.

To meet the requirement set up by the American Protestant Hospital Association for chaplains, a minister must now have a minimum of four quarters of clinical experience. The next session at Loma Linda University will be offered in the spring of 1967.

New Public Airport Now Contemplated

Development of a new public airport between Loma Linda and Norton Air Force Base is currently under consideration, according to John J. Creatura, chairman of the San Bernardino Regional Economic Development Council.

Plans call for the airport to be built parallel to the air base, between Tippecanoe Avenue and California Street. There is a possibility that control facilities might be built to serve both the air base and the airport. Heavy, as well as light aircraft may be accommodated.

The University-endorsed airport would include the advantages of providing additional light plane facilities for members of the University staff who own or fly airplanes, provide connections to major airlines for University or hospital business, and the potential for transporting patients from other locations to the hospital in the shortest possible time.

Finishing Touches Given KLH Addition As Students Move In

Interior finishing of the Kate Lindsay Hall women's residence addition will be completed before school begins, states Melba M. Olmstead, residence hall dean.

Women students will move into rooms on the first floor today, following the completion of carpet installation. The other floors should be ready for occupancy the first of the week, she says. All is a flurry of activity now.

Since the ground floor is designed with its own separate entrances and exits, it will permit 22 men students to be located there this year in order to help alleviate crowded conditions in the men's residence hall.

The average cost of a prescription for medicine in the US is $3.60 per acquisition per person.

LLU Officers to Participate In Estate-Planning Confab

Eight University officials will participate in a nation-wide estate-planning and investment conference to be conducted in Denver, Colorado, September 19-23.

Several of the University attendees will participate with union and local conference personnel in presentations, panels, and study groups during the five days.

Talks by Group

Howard B. Weeks, PhD, vice president for public relations and development, will present a paper on "Interorganizational Relationships and Cooperation," and will chair a panel on the training of field representatives.

William O. Reynolds, director of development, will discuss details of "The Family Security Plan," and Arthur W. Spoo, vice president of the Corporation, will present the subject of trust administration.

Kenneth H. Hopp, general counsel of the Foundation, is to explain the advantages of various types of gift and trust plans.

The various aspects of fiduciary returns versus internal revenue requirements will be explained by Richard A. James, legal officer of the Foundation.

Others attending from the University are Irving E. Gray, assistant treasurer, Kent W. Dickinson, associate manager, and Robert W. Frost, chief accountant, all of the Foundation.
